Steer for the East end of the New Wharf, when half way between the Light on the Reef and the New Wharf, keep away N. W., and along the Esplanade to an anchorage inside. All bearings magnetic.

WHAT will be the issue of the contest between big guns and armor-plated? The situation is becoming ridiculous; it is the old game of pail, duff, and pail. Says the gunmaker, "I'll make a gun that will punch every armor-plated in existence." Then, says the naval constructor, "I'll make a thicker plate, that will defy your gun, and build a ship that no known shot will penetrate." Then, retorts the first, "I'll make a still greater gun, and blow your ship to scrap iron." That's just how we are going on, and how we shall go, till vessels and guns become unmanageable. I see that machinery has been invented—presumably for necessity—for loading heavy guns without labor. It is ingenious, but I don't see why not extend this automatic principle to the manufacture of fighting machines that shall dispense with human fighters altogether, and do battle without bloodshed?

Six thousand tons are required to build one of the old-style 74-gun ships of the line.

Arrival of His Royal Highness the Duke of Edinburgh.

H. B. M.'s Ship Galatea, commanded by His Royal Highness the Duke of Edinburgh, arrived at Hilo on the 18th inst., and remained there two days, during which time some of the officers made an excursion to the Volcano—the Duke preferring to remain in Hilo, where he was the guest of Captain Thomas Spencer. Having left Hilo on the 20th, she arrived here on the afternoon of the 21st, a little after 5 o'clock. Mr. Wodehouse, H. B. M.'s Commissioner and Consul-General, repaired on board promptly, and was followed immediately by the Governor of Oahu and Major Prendergast, His Majesty's Chamberlain, who, in the name of the King, welcomed His Royal Highness, and invited him to take up his residence on shore. The Duke was pleased to accept His Majesty's invitation, and signified that he would land the next morning, at 10 o'clock, if it should be agreeable. Accordingly, the next morning the town was alive with people hurrying to the wharves: Consular, and other flags, flying from the flag-staffs; vessels gay with bunting, and every other demonstration of welcome which our people could give. Shortly after 10 o'clock, His Royal Highness left the ship—which is lying outside, in the roadstead—his barge having the Royal Standard of England at the bow. On arriving at the wharf, the Duke was met by Mr. Wodehouse, and Governor Dominis, who was accompanied by Majors Prendergast, Hoffmann and Harris, of the Staff, again welcomed him in the name of the King, and conducted him to His Majesty's carriage, which was in waiting to take him and his suite to the late residence of His Majesty's father, where he will reside, during his stay here. The crowd of citizens, which was very great, showed their welcome by most enthusiastic cheers.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Mr. Editor:—The Awake of last week has a portion of a couple of columns, one in English, and one in Hawaiian, devoted to an exposition of its own merits, which is all right enough. The following are some of the extracts:

"In January 1865, it passed into the hands of its present Editor, and in January 1867 into the hands of several young men of Hawaiian birth, though still under the same editorship. There has been from the first no change in its principles, no abatement in its steady advance. Its position in the literature of these Islands is well defined and important. It will be impossible for the future historian to write regarding the last few years with fullness and accuracy without making large use of our Independent Newspaper. We point to the Awake as a proud success."

"In the face of much opposition the Awake has been and is true to its independent principles. It has not been compromised to any party political or social. It is distinctly Evangelical in its religious sentiments."

"It will continue as untrammelled by opinion and faint-hearted friends as heretofore, and will when so moved, continue to add to our columns articles not considered very 'circumpect' by those against whom they are directed."

"And we are happy to be able to announce that arrangements are being made for a more vigorous prosecution of all the interests of the Awake."

"We calmly wait for the reaction from the centralization of power which is sure to come."

Now Mr. Editor, most people in striving to get above the vulgar crowd, and take the acknowledged position of leaders of the people have to meet opposition, oftentimes defeat and it may be that it is not until worn out and gone, that their loss is deplored and their success realized.

We cannot, then, but rejoice at the extraordinary fortune of two privileged individuals and congratulate men so useful and essential to the one to which, there are exceptions to the rule since the Awake deems that "it will be impossible to write regarding the last few years with fullness and accuracy without making use of our Independent Newspaper. We point to the Awake as a proud success."

What a pity it is that history cannot be written at once for the approval of interested parties, and that many minor circumstances must be forgotten and lost.

Were it not for the inflexible rule that the historian must come after—sometimes generations after the actors have passed away—were it not for this, we could wish Mr. Historian nothing better than that he and the successful Editor of the Awake might be brought together personally.

Who will pick up the spectacles of the "Independent" editor, who stands so firmly on "Right," who has not been compromised to any party political or social, when he falls worn out in the harness; whether the glasses of said spectacles will need re-setting or whether the Optician may insert glasses of perhaps another color, will pertain to his friend Mr. Historian to relate.

My only wish and counsel to the historian, since we probably shall not meet in the flesh is, that when he turns over the voluminous pages of the Awake (may be also turn over the leaves of Holy Writ) his attention may rest upon Prov. XXV, 16:

"Hast thou found honey? eat so much as is sufficient for thee, lest thou be filled therewith, and vomit it."

Yours, truly, INDEPENDENT.

THIS following letter came to hand by the next arrival after our last week's issue. It is anonymous, the writer's name not accompanying it so that we have no means of judging to whom it may be attributed. The handwriting is not that of any of our acquaintance there. It is a rule of this paper not to publish anonymous contributions, when unaccompanied by the name of the writer. In this instance, however, it is evident that the writer merely wishes to give his opinion, and does not wish to subject himself to the imputation of endeavoring to commend himself to any one, by it. It is likewise evident that the traditions and insulting language, which the P. C. A. gave utterance to on the 17th, do not express the "feeling of every individual, in this kingdom."

MAT, July, 1869.

The assaults on the Hon. Hermann A. Widemann, in the P. C. Advertiser, of the 17th inst., were unkind, ungenerous, uncalled for, and not based on a fair consideration of the subject. If the conductors of that paper will take a calm and impartial survey of the matter, they will find that there are other qualifications for a judge besides legal learning. Among these are firmness, decision of character, uprightness of principle, unswerving honor, and the purest integrity. Without these qualifications, the highest legal learning would be of no avail. To qualify a person for a Judge, he should also possess a sound judgment, a mind that is expansive, capable of generalizing, and grasping great principles, of analyzing truth and applying it in practice, and should have a manner—a deportment—which, at the same time that it is dignified, is marked with a gentlemanly courtesy toward all.

There is no unprejudiced man, who is intimately acquainted with the Hon. H. A. Widemann, who will not concur with me that he possesses these qualities in a high degree. In whatever capacity he has acted, he has proved himself equal to the situation. He has been industrious, honest, capable. He has labored with indefatigable zeal for the public interest, and has been guided by an eye single to duty. He has had some experience in a judicial station. As Circuit Judge of the Island of Kauai, he performed his judicial duties with firmness and impartiality, and I have never heard the first complaint against him.

With more than ordinary powers of intellect, with a sound and ripened judgment, and with his industrious habits, he can soon overcome the alleged defect—want of legal learning. He is thoroughly conversant with the Constitution and laws of the Hawaiian Islands; and if the principles of equity, natural justice, and good common sense are applied to these, in practice, he will make an able and efficient Judge of the Supreme Court, who will not permit the sacred principles of right and justice to be subservient to legal technicalities. Such a Judge, the people of Hawaii need, and he is tried. Try before you condemn. Do not prejudice a man; for, in so doing, you violate a great fundamental principle of all law, of common sense, and of COMMON JUSTICE.

As soon as the sky had cleared sufficiently, the return to town commenced, and the road presented a most lively appearance; every kind of vehicle, from the four in hand, driven by the Duke himself, to a dog-cart, and an immense crowd of pedestrians, made the appearance of a small Derby day.

The Kawaehoe choir were in attendance, and sang in their usual good and artistic style several native songs.
